

PERFORMING ARTS WEEK

Last Friday, Amy and her blonde-haired friend came in to teach us a marvellous routine. It was all about King Arthur and the round table, for performing and arts week.

First of all, they both very merrily introduced themselves, and told us to do a warm up. We did stretches, jumps, and we got a lot of exercise. Doing all the warm up's were such fun, and so enjoyable. The two women were super kind, and made up an extremely epic routine for us all. Learning the dance was amazingly fun, and I loved acting it out and learning it. After the warm up we all looked pooped and very sweaty. It was extremely fun.

After lots and lots of practise and effort we finally learnt the routine. Soon we would be performing this in the special Friday assembly, in front of the mums, dads, and class 2 and 1.

Then it was time to perform in front of everyone in the special Friday assembly. First class 1 did there dance and it was amazing and exiting. Then it was class2's turn and it was extremely good. Now it was our classes turn and we had a blast it was so much fun, I loved it.
